MN Case Number: 06-cv-1497

Supplemental Declaration and Expert Report

Dr. Doug Jacobson, Ph.D., CFCE

Ph.D. Computer Engineering
Certified Forensic Computer Examiner
International Association of Computer Investigative Specialists

Qualifications & Prior Testimony

- 1) I am employed as an associate Professor of Electrical and Computer Engineering at Iowa State University and as the Director of the Iowa State University Information Assurance Center. I also have an appointment with the Iowa State University police department where I aid in computer forensics.
- 2) In addition, I am the Chief Technical Officer and founder of Palisade Systems, a high-tech computer security company that specializes in network monitoring and filtering technologies.
- 3) My employment with Iowa State University began in 1982 as a computer programmer. I completed my Ph.D. in Computer Engineering with a focus in computer networking in December 1985. In January 1986, I was hired by the Department of Electrical and Computer Engineering as an Assistant Professor to teach and research in the area of computer networks. Since that time, I have taught over 25 classes in computer networks at both the undergraduate and graduate level. I have received over 5 million dollars in funding for my research and have written several articles and made numerous presentations on the topic.
- 4) In 1995, I created and taught one of the first computer security classes at Iowa State University and in the country. Under my guidance, in 1999, Iowa State University was recognized by the National Security Agency as a center of excellence. And in 2000, the Iowa State University Information Assurance Center was created. I am its first and only director. I am a Certified Forensics Computer Examiner. My Curriculum Vitae is attached as Exhibit (A)
- 5) On September 9th 2003, I testified in front of the U.S. Senate Judiciary Committee on the uses of peer-to-peer protocols.

Prior Experience

- 6) I have been teaching computer networking since 1986 and written papers and performed research on computer networks.
- 7) I have given over 50 presentations on computer security and networks at conferences, workshops, and various meetings.

Civ. 06-1497

- 8) I hold two patents in the area of computer network security and have won two R&D 100 awards for technologies I developed at Palisade Systems. One of these technologies is designed to detect and block peer-to-peer network protocols in addition to over 100 other network protocols.
- 9) I have assisted the Iowa State University Police department on several computer cases including cases using peer-to-peer networks to distribute pirated software and child pornography.
- 10) One of my graduate students, under my supervision and guidance, developed a system that monitors peer-to-peer networks and other forms of file-sharing for child pornography.
- 11) My rate for analysis and testimony is $200.00 per hour. Additional expenses relating to analysis, testimony, and travel are reimbursed at the incurred costs.

Description of Technologies Involved

- 12) This case involves copyright infringement using computers connected to the Internet and involves the identification of the computers using their IP addresses. How IP addresses are used in the Internet, how IP addresses are assigned within the Internet, and how IP addresses and computers are identified is described below.

The Internet and Addressing

The Internet is a collection of interconnected computers or network devices. In order to be able to deliver traffic from one computer or network device to another, each computer or network device must have a unique address within the Internet. The unique address is called the Internet Protocol (IP) address. This is analogous to the postal system where each mail drop has a unique address.

Each computer or network device is connected to a network which is administered by an organization like a business, internet service provider, college or university. Each network, in turn, is analogous to a zip code.

Information is transported through the Internet in small chunks called packets. Each packet traverses the Internet and is reassembled by the destination machine. Each packet contains both the source and destination IP addresses. The source address is analogous to the return address on a letter and the destination IP address is analogous to the send to address on a letter.

IP Address Assignment

Every computer or network device directly connected to the Internet must have a unique IP address. To ensure each IP address is unique, a block of IP addresses is allocated to an organization such as an Internet Service Provider, business, college or university. The IP address allocation is done in a highly structured manner with each set of IP addresses (a network) allocated by a single centralized authority. Each organization is then responsible for allocating the addresses to individual devices.

There are two allocation methods for the devices connected to the Internet. The first allocation method provides the device with a static IP address and requires the user of the device to provide the IP address to the device during configuration. The owner of the network typically will provide the user of the device with the address information. This method is often used in businesses and colleges or universities. Two devices cannot effectively function if they are directly connected to the Internet simultaneously with the same IP address.

The second method involves dynamic addressing. With this method the device asks the network provider for an IP address when it wishes to use the network. The device will send a request, and the network provider will respond back with a packet that contains an IP address. The IP address is often allocated for a short period of time, and the device must request a renewal from the network provider. This method is called DHCP and is commonly used by Internet Service Providers (ISPs). The network provider will maintain a log of address allocations. As in the static case, two devices cannot effectively function if they are directly connected to the Internet simultaneously with the same IP address.

- 13) This case involves illegal file distribution using peer-to-peer networks. Peer-to-peer networks are a method used to distribute files from a user's computer to other users on the internet. They can also be used to obtain files from other users. Peer-to-peer networks are often used to distribute copyrighted material like songs and movies. In addition, peer-to-peer networks are also used to distribute other files including pornography, child pornography, computer virus, and data files. A more detailed explanation of peer-to-peer network is included below.

Peer-to-Peer Networks

The basic idea behind peer-to-peer networks is to allow people to connect to each other and distribute files or other information. Unlike the World Wide Web (web sites) where data is stored on central web services and users connect to a central web server to download information from the web site, peer-to-peer networks allow users to connect to each other and transfer files directly from user to user. The users of peer-to-peer networks typically do not know each other nor do they have any relationship outside the peer-to-peer network. The users of the peer-to-peer network often think they are anonymous when they distribute files. In reality, they can be identified using the IP address. The IP address of the computer offering the files for distribution can be captured by a user during a search or a file transfer. That IP address can be associated with an organization such as, an ISP, business, college or university which can identify the user by the IP address.

Peer-to-peer networks are designed to facilitate the searching and transfer of data. Two basic types of peer-to-peer networks are decentralized and semi-decentralized.

With the decentralized peer-to-peer network, every computer that is part of the network has its own list of files that are offered for distribution, and each computer is connected to a small number of other computers (neighbors). Each neighbor is connected to a small number of computers and so on. When a user wishes to search for a file, a request is sent to each neighbor and each neighbor sends the request to the next neighbor and so on. If a computer gets the request and has a match, it will send a message back to the requester telling them it has the file(s) and providing them with information about the file(s).

The semi-decentralized peer-to-peer network uses a central index server that contains an index of files that are offered for distribution by the users of the network. The files themselves are still stored on the user's computer and not on the central server. Files are transferred directly from one user to another user. In addition, users can connect directly to each other like in the decentralized peer-to-peer networks. The central server makes searching more efficient. The semi-decentralized model can have more than one central server interconnected in their own peer-to-peer network. Benefits of this model include speeding up searches and distributing the work load. This also provides redundancy so that if one server node quits, the other nodes can still function and the network is still usable.

KaZaA

KaZaA is one of the most popular semi-decentralized based peer-to-peer software programs in use today. KaZaA uses a protocol referred to as Fasttrack to create the semi-decentralized peer-to-peer network. When KaZaA is installed, it creates a folder called the "shared folder" on the user's computer that is used to store files that are downloaded from other users and for distribution to other users. By default this shared folder is located in the KaZaA program directory. KaZaA also provides the ability for the user to set up additional sharing folders that are used to share files with other KaZaA users. When a user starts KaZaA, they are connected to a central index server (super node) and KaZaA offers or advertises the files they have available for distribution.

Distributing files first requires that the user must put the file into a shared folder. Information about the files within these shared folders is uploaded to the index server and can be downloaded by other users of the KaZaA network. This is analogous to putting a list of copyrighted music you have available in a public place and telling everyone they are welcome to stop by your house and pick up a copy of the song.

When files are distributed, there is a set of identifiers that are used to tie the files back to the user. These identifiers include the IP address of the client distributing the files, the name of the file, file size and the content hash. In addition, there are file descriptors that provide information like the artist name, album name, and description field. This information is used in the search process. The description field is used to provide a description of the files and is part of the KaZaA system. This field is not part of the original data stored on a CD, but rather is added by users who put files into the KaZaA shared folder(s). This field is sometimes employed by the user who made the copy or "ripped" the original copyrighted material to brand the file with their name or handle (a fake name). The content hash is a mathematical function that is used to identify files that are the same. This allows the user to search for the file if the original download fails or to increase the transfer speed.

To find a file the user submits a query to the super node. The super node looks in its database for the file(s) that match the search parameters. If one or more of the users connected to the super node has the files(s) that match the request, then the super node returns the IP address(s) and the file description(s) of all matches. Super nodes send queries between each other thus expanding the number of users the file can be distributed to. Users may also connect directly between each other, so if a user finds a file on another user's machine he or she may then query the machine directly to see what other files are offered for distribution.

KaZaA cannot be used to listen to music that is stored on another computer in the KaZaA network. In order to listen to or preview music that was stored on another computer, the file has to be downloaded to the user's computer. KaZaA will allow, however, a user to listen to small samples of music that can be purchased from the KaZaA web site.

In addition to KaZaA, there are several other applications that use the Fasttrack protocol. These applications include iMesh, Grokster, and iSwipe. These applications are available on computers using Microsoft Windows, Apple OS, and Linux. Since these applications use the Fasttrack protocol, users with one application can share files with users using another application. The name KaZaA is often used to refer to the applications running the Fasttrack protocol.

Materials Considered

- 14) I have reviewed the underlining investigative data for the Thomas case. This includes all of the data supplied by MediaSentry. I also have reviewed information supplied by Defendant's Internet Service Provider (ISP) Charter Communication. Below is a list of the materials I considered in developing my conclusions.
- a) MediaSentry Screenshots
  - b) MediaSentry Systemlog
  - c) MediaSentry UserLog (compressed)
  - d) MediaSentry UserLog
  - e) MediaSentry Download Logs
  - f) Certificate of Registration
  - g) MediaSentry Trace
  - h) Charter Communication subpoena response
  - i) Forensics copy of the defendant's hard drive
  - j) Deposition of Eric Stanley
  - k) Deposition of Jammie Thomas
  - l) Interrogatory of Jammie Thomas
  - m) Various court filing in this mater

Conclusions

- 15) I will testify to the procedures used and results obtained by MediaSentry coupled with the information supplied by Defendants ISP, to demonstrate the Defendant's Internet account and computer were used to download and upload Copyrighted music from the Internet using the KaZaA peer-to-peer network.
- 16) I will testify that MediaSentry found over 1900 files shared on a computer using the KaZaA file sharing program based on the screenshots. The KaZaA user id is "tereastarr@KaZaA"
- 17) I will testify that MediaSentry downloaded 11 songs as shown in Systemlog and the MediaSentry download logs and that many of these songs are copyrighted as shown in the Certificates of Registration.
- 18) I will testify that the information from MediaSentry (Systemlog, UserLog, UserLog (compressed), and the Download Logs) indicates that the computer with IP address 24.179.199.117 offered 1702 audio and music files, most of them are copyrighted music files, for distribution using the KaZaA program on 2/21/2005 starting at or around 11:05:01 PM EST through at least 12:25:15 AM EST on 2/22/2005.
- 19) I will testify that the information from MediaSentry provided in the MediaSentry trace shows that Charter Communication is the Internet provider for the computer with the IP address of 24.179.199.117 on 2/21/2005 starting at or around 11:05:01 PM EST through at least 12:25:15 AM EST on 2/22/2005, during which time the 1702 audio and music files were being distributed using the KaZaA program.

- 20) I will testify that the subpoena response from Charter Communication identifies Jammie Thomas as the subscriber of record for the IP address 24.179.199.117 on 2/21/2005 at 11:09:01 PM EST.
- 21) I will testify that, based on the interrogation of Jammie Thomas that the MAC address of the cable modem owned by Jammie Thomas is the same MAC address as reported by the subpoena response from Charter Communications and that the computer connected to the cable modem was the computer used to distribute copyrighted music.
- 22) I will testify that, based on all of the information provided that the computer that had the IP address of 24.179.199.117 on 2/21/2005 starting at or around 11:05:01 PM EST through at least 12:25:15 AM EST on 2/22/2005 was registered to the Defendant and that the said computer was used to distribute copyrighted music.
- 23) I will testify that, based on the MediaSentry UserLog, the music found on the Defendant's computer was downloaded from other users on the Internet.
- 24) I will testify that, based on the examination of the hard drive supplied by the defendant that the songs and album art stored on the hard drive were copied from a high speed digital device like a hard drive on to the hard drive supplied by the defendant for examination.
- 25) I will testify that, based on the examination of the hard drive supplied by the defendant that the songs were not ripped from a music CD using windows media player directly on to the hard drive supplied by the defendant.
- 26) I will testify that, based on the examination of the hard drive supplied by the defendant, as shown in exhibit B, that the songs found on the hard drive supplied by the defendant were added after 2/21/2005.
- 27) I will testify that, based on the depositions and documents from Best Buy that the computer owned by the defendant had its hard drive replaced in early March 2005. I will further testify that the hard drive supplied by the defendant for examination was not the hard drive installed on the computer that was connected to the Internet on 2/21/2005.
- 28) I reserve the right to review additional discovery materials, as they are made available for my review, and use any of the material considered as exhibits in my testimony.
